

Theses and Dissertations, From 1922 to 2013, Addressing High School Journalism Topics (With Advisor, Chair or Director Noted, if Known):

- Abdulla, D. A. (1966). Status survey of high school journalism in West Virginia. West Virginia University. (Adv.: Guy H. Stewart)
- Adams, D. E. (1984). A study of Kansas scholastic newspaper content and management practices in a first amendment context. Kansas State University. (Adv.: Sam Keys)
- Adams, E. J. (1964). Journalism instruction in Louisiana high schools and colleges. Louisiana State University. (Adv.: Frank J. Price)
- Ahlersmeyer, B. K. (1995). A survey of the relationship between Indiana state English language proficiencies and Indiana high school journalism programs. Ball State University. (Adv.: Marilyn Weaver)
- Aizley, S. G. (1996). Class! Newspaper: An application of rhetorical theory and fantasy theme analysis. University of Nevada, Las Vegas.
- Ajunwa, K. (2011). It's our school too: Youth activism as educational reform, 1951-1979. Temple University. (Adv.: William W. Cutler)
- Alan, N. (2002). An investigation of the relationships between high school environment and the students' knowledge and attitudes regarding free expression. (unknown)
- Aldred, V. A. (1969). Educational, professional and interest qualities of Hoosier junior and senior high school yearbook and newspaper advisers. Ball State University. (Adv.: Louis E. Ingelhart)
- Alemania-Palmes, G. (1986). Teaching ESL in high school journalism classes in the Philippines. Ball State University. (Adv.: Chris Ely)
- Amster, S-E L. (2004). Seeds of cynicism: Studying the conflict between journalistic inquiry and school authority. University of California, San Diego. (Adv.: Olga Vasquez/Ellen Seiter)
- Applegate, A. A. (1923). The newspaper in the schools. University of Montana.
- Armstrong, P. G. (1930). A study of school papers for the practices in modern high school athletics as contrasted to the supposed values held by administrators. Pennsylvania State College.
- Arnold, G. T. (1980). An examination of the status, functions, and perceived needs of journalism education in the high schools of West Virginia. Ohio University. (Adv.: J. William Click)
- Arnold, M. K. (1994). Student freedom of expression and high school journalism advisers: A legal and educational dilemma. The University of Iowa. (Adv.: John Soloski)
- Arthaud, R. E. (1951). The value of a school newspaper as a public relations device in the small secondary school in Montana. Colorado State College.
- Ashby, N. M. (1927) The status and purpose of representative school journalism courses. University of Arizona.
- Averill, G. K. (2006). Teams communicating memories: Leadership improvements for

- yearbook. Royal Roads University (Canada). (Adv.: Doug Hamilton)
- Avery, K. B. (1986). The constitution and student publications: Two legal theories. University of Miami.
- Baber, D. A. (1973). Where are we going? The ideal, potential educational role of the state high school press association. University of Missouri- Columbia. (Adv.: Robert P. Knight)
- Baker, C. L. (1956). A study of the training of high school newspaper advisers in California and Indiana). Stanford University.
- Baker, R. L. (1979). An investigation of key factors pertinent to the establishment of a program for journalism teachers in the secondary schools of South Carolina. University of South Carolina. (Adv.: Perry J. Ashley)
- Barnes, D. B. (1952). A study of high-school newspapers in North Carolina. Duke University.
- Barnes, E. R. (1957). The status of journalism in selected secondary schools of Oklahoma. University of Oklahoma.
- Barston, L. W. (1928). How one high school paper won all-American rating in the national contest- Central Inter-scholastic Press Association: The North Star-North High School, Omaha, Neb. Teachers College, Columbia University.
- Bartesaghi, M. (1992). Reconstructing the high school experience: The role of yearbooks in the social construction of memory. University of Pennsylvania. (Adv.: Klaus Krippendorff/William Labov)
- Bartlett, G. B. (2001). Newspaper design curriculum unit. Memorial University of Newfoundland (Canada). (Adv.: Clar Doyle)
- Baskin, J. E. (1964). Graphic practices in student publications in the schools of Pennsylvania. The Pennsylvania State University. (Adv.: Viktor Lowenfeld/Kenneth R. Beittel)
- Bass, G. F. (1991). The rise and fall of free speech in the public schools. Boston College.
- Beatty, W. J. (1930). An analytical and descriptive account of news publications in the high schools of the Chicago area. Northwestern University.
- Becker, B. (1992). School publications policies and procedures for high school administrators: A model set of guidelines. Kansas State University. (Adv.: G. Kent Stewart)
- Beinert, C. J. (1940). Practices in publishing, managing, printing, and financing pupil-produced newspapers in the public high schools of Iowa. Iowa State College.
- Bennett, D. L. (1975). Freedom of expression in secondary schools: A study of student newspapers and journalism programs in Oklahoma high schools and their relationship to human rights and human relations. University of Oklahoma. (Adv.: Glenn R. Snider)
- Bennett, D. L. (1969). The status of scholastic journalism: An analytical survey of the nature of and attitude toward scholastic journalism in Oklahoma. University of Oklahoma. (Adv.: Vishwa M. Mishra)
- Bennett, E. E. (1930) A survey of the appeal of the high school newspaper to the high school student. University of Pittsburgh.
- Bentel, D. (1950). Teaching journalism by audio-visual methods. Teachers College, Columbia University.

- Billings, W. H. (1974). High school journalism in North Carolina: A survey of teachers, programs, and instructional needs. University of North Carolina. (Adv.: Eugene F. Shaw)
- Billingsley, J. M. (1992). Teachers of the year in journalism and other journalism teachers: A comparison. University of Texas at Austin.
- Biringer, J. A. (1980). Selected Pennsylvania secondary school students' knowledge of freedom of expression rights and responsibilities. Temple University. (Adv.: H.C. Hudgins)
- Birke, C. A. (1999). Attitudes of public school superintendents toward student press freedom in states with and states without student press freedom laws. Ball State University. (Adv.: Marilyn Weaver)
- Blank-Libra, J. (1988). A guide to writing for high school journalists. University of Montana.
- Blick, T. E. (1986). Practices, management, and advising of high school newspapers and their ratings in a national contest/critique. University of Tennessee. (Adv.: James Crook)
- Blinn, J. R. (1982). A comparison of selected writing skills of high school journalism and non-journalism students. Ohio University. (Adv.: J. William Click)
- Boggs, T. J. (2005). The first amendment rights of high school students and their student newspapers. West Virginia University. (Adv.: Terry Wimmer/Ivan Pinnell)
- Booth, R. E. (1971). A study of high school newspapers in the state of Kansas. Kansas State University.
- Boudignon, L. E. (2002). The yearbook program: Observation and analysis of secondary school yearbook teachers and the implementation of their curriculum. University of Toronto. (Adv.: John Ross)
- Bower, B. (1957). Present status of yearbooks in curricula of 128 representative secondary schools in Missouri. University of Missouri.
- Bowles, D. A. (1978). Newspaper editorial support for freedom of speech and press, 1919-1969. The University of Wisconsin.
- Boyd, J. A. (1941). The editorial page: A study of the editorial page of printed high school newspapers in Indiana. Indiana University.
- Boyd, J. A. (1960). High school newspaper advisers in Indiana and their instructional program in journalism. Indiana University. (Adv.: M.E. Stapley)
- Boyer, B. (1957). Present status of yearbooks in curricula of 128 representative secondary schools in Missouri. University of Missouri.
- Braden, J. N. (1970). A study of the relationship between teacher, principal and student attitudes and organizational climate. University of Missouri- Columbia.
- Branson, R. J. (1986). First amendment rights and high school journalism: The evolving definition of substantial disruption. University of Oregon.
- Braycich, J. N. (1951). Criteria for improving the quality of makeup for high school duplicated papers. Montana State University.
- Breiseth, R. C. (1925). A study of the content and management of high school papers. University of Minnesota.
- Brenner, D. J. (1957). A study and evaluation of the summer high school publications workshop

- at Ohio University. Ohio University.
- Breternitz, L. A. (1940). The extra-curricular program of activities in selected three, four, and six-year high schools in Nebraska. Colorado State College.
- Brier, H. M. (1931). The status and teaching of news writing in the high schools of the state of Washington in 1931. University of Washington.
- Brock, D. J. (2012). University of Florida. The value and use of historical-based processes in a contemporary high school photography program. (Adv.: Elizabeth DeLacruz)
- Brooks, N. (1977). Preparation of teachers of journalism and advisers of publications in Indiana high schools. Indiana University. (Adv.: Mary Benedict)
- Brooks, R. F. & M. E. Brooks. (1935). The extra-curricular activities of the secondary schools of West Virginia. Northwestern University.
- Brown, F. S. (1957). A study of student newspapers in the public high schools of New Mexico. University of New Mexico.
- Brown, L. W. (1969). A history of the school of journalism, University of South Carolina. University of South Carolina. (Adv.: Albert T. Scroggins). (Note: Other histories of departments, schools or colleges of journalism and mass communications may also mention the school's support of or the headquartering of scholastic press associations.)
- Browne, K. A. (1931). Desirable traits of a publications adviser and teacher of journalistic writing. Stanford University.
- Bull, H. C. (1997). High school administrators' perceptions of their comfort levels with the law of safe schools. University of Northern Colorado.
- Bumstead, P. (1996). A study of high school advisers' attitudes toward and use of multicultural components in high school journalism programs in six states. Kansas State University. (Adv.: J.D. Spears)
- Bumstead, P. (1990). Scholastic journalism: Its role in Kansas public high schools. Wichita State University. (Adv.: Vernon Keel)
- Burkhart, R. S. (1927). An analysis and evaluation of the contents of the high school yearbook. University of Pittsburgh.
- Butcher, W. W. (1934). A study of Kansas high school newspapers. Kansas State Teachers College of Emporia.
- Butler, J. M. (1980). An assessment of attitude patterns of selected persons in two Iowa school communities toward the school newspaper: A Q-methodological approach. The University of Iowa. (Advs.: John McAdams/Albert Talbott)
- Butler, L. A. (1930). An analysis and evaluation of high school newspapers. University of Pittsburgh.
- Buttles, M. S. (1949). Utilizing the school newspaper for guidance purposes. Boston University.
- Callender, R. C. (1977). Teaching language arts by the use of mass communications concepts: A handbook for secondary school teachers. Ball State University. (Adv.: Ruth A. Iliff)
- Calvert, B. A. (1930). The high school newspaper as a socializing factor in the senior high school. Teachers College, Columbia University.

- Campbell, L. R. (1940). The teacher of journalistic activities in the American public high school. Northwestern University.
- Carroll, J. H. (1975). Phased-elective modular sequences for high school journalism. East Texas State University. (Adv.: W.J. Bell)
- Carter, J. C. (1964). Student newspapers and magazines in senior high schools of the Philadelphia metropolitan area. Temple University.
- Carver, P. T. (1967). A method for instructing high school students in the history of journalism. Ohio State University. (Adv.: Paul Barton)
- Casiday, H. L. (1934). A study of journalism in California high schools. Stanford University.
- Cates, E. H. (1928). The differentiation of journalism from English in high schools. State University of Iowa.
- Cates, J. M. (1976). A study of the attitudes of journalism students in Dallas high schools toward journalism careers. University of North Texas.
- Caudill, M. A. (2007). Yearbooks as a genre: A case study. Clemson University. (Adv.: Susan Hilligoss)
- Chambliss, J. M. (1952). The high school principal's attitude toward scholastic journalism. State University of Iowa.
- Chandler, M. R. D. (1976). A textbook for yearbook editing, design, production. Oklahoma State University. (Adv.: Leon L. Munson)
- Chavez, R. (1968). A study of the role of journalism and publications programs in the high school curriculum. The University of Texas at El Paso. (Adv.: John W. McFarland)
- Christine, M. A. (1960). A comparison between the standard eleventh grade English course and an experimental course in communications at the eleventh grade level as to methodology, objectives and results in the teaching of composition, research skills and interpretation of periodic literature. Marquette University.
- Clark, K. M. (1999). A critical analysis of internet sites for secondary language arts and journalism teachers. University of Nebraska- Lincoln.
- Clark, T. R. (1991). Mississippi superintendents' and secondary educators' knowledge of school law as it relates to student rights in selected areas. University of Southern Mississippi.
- Clarke, B. L. (1991). The Hazelwood v. Kuhlmeier Supreme Court decision: Its effects on Oklahoma public high school newspapers. University of Oklahoma.
- Click, J. W. (1977). Development of a model for the short-term training of high school publications advisers. The Ohio State University. (Adv.: John C. Belland)
- Cloer, T. (1978). A study of the professional and educational backgrounds of the photography teachers in the Texas secondary schools. University of North Texas.
- Coates, J. D. (1937). The extra-curricular program of activities in Kentucky. Colorado State College.
- Coe, W. C. (1928). A study of the make-up, management, and content of high school newspapers. University of Chicago.

- Cohen, E. D. (1979). Policy guidelines on student rights and responsibilities in Florida public schools. University of Miami.
- Conaway, A. (2012). An analysis of First Amendment protection for student expression, mid-1900s-2011. University of Oregon. (Adv.: Tim Gleason)
- Converse, E. J. (1928). Certain educational values claimed for the high school newspapers. Yale University
- Cooksey, E. W. (1971). Problems of school newspapers as perceived by secondary principals. University of Toledo.
- Cooper, A. C. (1931). A study of student publications in the white accredited secondary public schools of Virginia. University of Virginia.
- Cooper, J. A. (2010). Changing the traditional high school photography curriculum: Integrating traditional and digital technologies. Georgai State University. (Adv.: Melody Milbraandt)
- Corlett, J. H. (1973). High school newspaper production in the Four Corner states. University of Arizona. (Adv.: Philip Mangelsdorf)
- Corry, F. (1930). The school newspaper and its use in the teaching of English. Teachers College, Columbia University.
- Cranford, R. J. (1953). A sample survey of the attitudes of Iowa high school seniors toward journalism and careers in journalism. State University of Iowa.
- Crawford, I. S. (1969). Journalism activities in Texas public high schools with special reference to influences on the work of journalism teachers and advisers. East Texas State University. (Adv.: W. J. Bell)
- Criswell, G. S. (1941). A study of the subject matter in high school journalism courses and of the possibilities for extension and improvement. University of Colorado.
- Crook, J. (1963). A Study of the Relationship Between Newspapermen and Public School Administrators in Iowa. University of Iowa.
- Crook, J. (1973). Teaching About Mass Media in the Public Schools. Iowa State University.
- Crow, L. R. (1992). The impact of Texas high school students' and principals' perceptions of student press freedom following the Hazelwood v. Kuhlmeier Supreme Court decision. University of Oklahoma.
- Cuzzocrea, J. L. (2002). Participation in extracurricular activities and the sense of belonging, self-esteem, and risk of dropping out among grade eleven students. University of Windsor (Canada). (Adv.: Linda McKay)
- Dale, N. (1995). Utilizing collaborative learning to teach television production. The Union Institute.
- Daniels, G. L. (2002). Uncovering factors in urban high school students' media career considerations: A media center interest model. University of Georgia. (Adv.: Lee Becker)
- Davies, A. L. (1963). A study of the status of journalism and student publications in Kansas junior high school. University of Kansas.
- Davenport, A. M. (1973). A question of administrative censorship: High school press. University of Wyoming.

- Davinroy, K. A. H. (1998). Developing a literate identity through participation on a high school newspaper. University of Colorado at Boulder. (Adv. Shelby Wolf)
- Davis, I. W. (1940). High school yearbook practices in Ohio. Ohio State University.
- Davis, N. T. (1982) Reliability and internal organization of scholastic press association critique services. Indiana University. (Adv.: Mary Benedict)
- Davis, R. (1929). High school journalism. University of Washington.
- Davis-Cooper, S. (1995). Student-produced media and free expression in Tennessee public high schools in 1994. University of Tennessee. (Adv.: Dorothy Bowles)
- Deady, J. J. (1970). A comparison of technical graphic arts competencies needed by high school journalism and graphic arts teachers in Indiana. Indiana University. (Adv.: Thomas R. White)
- Deal, L. E. (1981). An investigation of student speech and press rights in the state of Washington. University of Washington. (Adv.: Roger Simpson)
- Dean, W. F. (1971). A study to identify elements of a model pre-service training program for secondary school journalism teachers. Texas Tech University. (Adv.: Weldon E. Beckner)
- Decker, R. G. (1954). Sponsoring the school newspaper: A guide for advisers. Teachers College, Columbia University.
- Deeley, N. D. (1999). Student rights and responsibilities in schools: Has anything changed since Tinker v. Des Moines Independent School District (1969)? Spalding University.
- Dennis, J. (2007). Prior review in the high school newspaper: Perceptions, practices, and effects. University of Georgia. (Adv.: Kent Middleton)
- Deroche, D. G. (1994). Illinois schools districts' response to Hazelwood v. Kuhlmeier. University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana. (Adv.: P. Thurston)
- Deutsch, S. J. (2001). Factors associated with censorship attitudes and behaviors of principals, advisers, and student editors. Indiana University. (Adv.: Martha McCarthy)
- Dewlaney, B. C. (1928). Problems confronting teachers of newswriting in California. Stanford University.
- Dexter, M. L. (1933). Editing and copy reading high school publications. Kansas State College.
- DiAmore, J. R. (1997). Attitudes and opinions of principals and non-athletic co-curricular advisers concerning activity advisership in New Jersey public and nonpublic high schools. Widener University. (Adv.: Robert J. Wright)
- Dick, E. T. (1936). Professional problems of the high school journalism teacher. University of Idaho.
- Dickey, J. L. (1971). A study of the influence of the Ball State workshops on students selecting Ball State University. Ball State University. (Adv.: Louis E. Ingelhart)
- Dilbeck, P. A. (2003). Who's teaching journalism in Oklahoma secondary schools? University of Oklahoma.
- Dodd, J. E. (1976). The plight of the high school press adviser. University of Kentucky. (Adv.: Dwight Teeter)

- Dodd, J. E. (1982). High school principals' and newspaper advisers' evaluations of the important characteristics for newspaper advisers. University of Kentucky. (Adv.: Harry Barnard)
- Dubois, R. E. (1922). A course of study for high school journalism. Ohio State University.
- Dumire, J. E. (1962). Survey of journalism in West Virginia's public secondary schools. West Virginia University. (Advs.: Guy H. Stewart/Quintus C. Wilson)
- Dvorak, J. E. (1975). High school principal-newspaper adviser relationships and their effects on freedom of school-sponsored newspapers. University of Missouri- Columbia. (Adv.: William H. Taft)
- Dyer, W. C. (1928). Present practices of financing annuals in Ohio schools. Ohio State University.
- Economy, N. M. (1964). A study of the status of the yearbook in the comprehensive high schools of Kansas. University of Kansas.
- Eaton, B. S. W. (1975). A survey of conditions, equipment and facilities for high school publications in the state of Indiana. Ball State University. (Adv.: Louis E. Ingelhart)
- Eller, L. L. (2005). Instant message communication and its impact upon written language. West Virginia University. (Adv.: Terry Lee Wimmer)
- Ellis, B. G. (1990). Major inhibitory factors in the assessment of themes by Oregon high school English teachers. Oregon State University. (Adv.: Marcelene Ling)
- Ellis, C. E. (1948). Educational interpretation by means of high-school newspapers. University of Wyoming.
- English, L. C. (1976). Student rights and high school newspaper coverage: A view from four audiences. Texas Tech University.
- Erdmann, L. M. (1982). The working situation of high school newspaper advisers in northern Illinois. Northern Illinois University. (Adv.: Abraham Bass)
- Ervin, R. F. (1973). Functions of the high school press as viewed by three publics within a high school social system. Oklahoma State University. (Adv.: Walter J. Ward)
- Evanchyk, L. P. (1993). Education, experience, and certification among Florida high school journalism advisers. University of West Florida. (Adv.: Martha Saunders)
- Evans, L. M. (1951). Scholastic journalism in Arkansas high schools. University of Missouri.
- Evans, M. E. (1943). The curricula of the high schools of Texas, 1942-1943. University of Texas.
- Evans, S. W. (2000). Channel One in the curriculum: Teaching tool or free equipment for schools? Baylor University. (Adv.: Larry J. Browning)
- Eveslage, T. E. (1979). Toward an integrated model for assessing compliance with federal circuit court decisions: Prior restraint in public schools. Southern Illinois University. (Adv.: Robert Trager)
- Fabian, F. H. (1980). Public school response to the out-of-school conduct of students: The case law. University of Georgia.
- Fairbanks, A. T. (1927). High school publications: The newspaper and the annual. Boston

- University.
- Feldman, S. N. (1973). The high school underground press: Content analysis, member attitudes, and beliefs. University of California- Los Angeles.
- Fink, S. C. (1978). Veto power: Censorship and the high school press. Ball State University. (Adv.: Frank E. Walsh)
- Fischbach, R. L. (1980). A gatekeeper study of South Dakota public high school newspaper. Iowa State University. (Adv.: J.K. Hvistendahl)
- Fleenor, L. A. (1929). An analysis of the content, management, and cost of high school annuals. University of Minnesota.
- Foley, B. J. (1954). The kinds and extent of classroom news, features, and pictures in forty high school newspapers. Florida State University.
- Fontana, C. J. (1980). The federal constitution and the student: The aftermath of Tinker and Gault. University of Pittsburgh.
- Foss, G. E. (1937). The value of journalism in the high school curriculum. State University of Montana.
- Franklin, J. (1948). A study of the high school newspaper. Clark University.
- Freund, M. A. (1981). A typology of high school student newspapers. Northern Illinois University. (Adv.: Anthony J. Scantlen)
- Freeland, M. (1965). An introductory study of journalism for elementary school children. University of Missouri.
- Freeman, M. E. (1932). The school newspaper as a device in teaching English with particular reference to 'the Whirlwind,' school newspaper of Central Junior High School, Amarillo, Texas. Texas Technological College.
- Fromm, M. E. (2010). Everything but 'censorship': How U.S. newspapers have framed student free speech and press, 1969-2008. University of Maryland. (Adv.: Susan Moeller)
- Furst, H. D. (1928). A study of the high school annual in the rural and exempted village schools of Ohio for the school year 1926-1927. Ohio State University.
- Gayda, T. D. (2005). A workbook for high school newspaper design. Ball State University. (Adv.: Marilyn Weaver)
- Gagnard, A. L. (1980). Legal and ethical judgments of high-school newspaper advisers on first amendment rights. Louisiana State University. (Adv.: E. Joseph Broussard)
- Garets, W. E. (1947). Journalism in the high school: A course of study. University of Idaho.
- Garlick, E. E. (1946). An analysis and evaluation of junior high school newspapers published in selected cities of North Carolina. University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.
- Gary, R. O. (1970). A comprehensive study of high school journalism in southern Illinois high schools. Southern Illinois University. (Adv.: Bryce W. Rucker)
- Gauley, J. L. (1997). High school students and American core value orientations. University of Denver. (Adv.: Edith W. King)
- Gauthier, L. A. (1996). South Carolina high school journalism: Censorship attempts, reactions and results. University of South Carolina.

- Georgiady, A. P. (1939). Analysis of the elementary school newspapers. University of Chicago.
- Gestaut, J. P. (1974). A survey of student participation in extracurricular activities in integrated high schools of Arkansas as depicted by yearbooks. University of Arkansas.
- Gilbert, M. E. (1931). A standard course of study in high school journalism for the State of Iowa. University of Iowa.
- Gill, J. C. (1928). The extent to which high school papers aid in developing inquiry. Pennsylvania State College.
- Gilliland, D. L. (1998). A content analysis of online high school newspapers in the United States. Ball State University. (Adv.: David E. Sumner)
- Gillispie, M. A. (1939). A survey of journalistic practices in small high schools in the United States. Syracuse University.
- Gissler, J. H. (1982). First amendment rights as applied to the high school press. University of Nebraska at Omaha. (Adv.: Hugh P. Cowdin)
- Glowacki, J. W. (1971). Placement test, daily assignments and photo evaluation form for the Ball State University summer workshops in photography for high school students. Ball State University. (Adv.: Robert L. Heintzelman)
- Goodson, F. T. (1993). Defining community: The high school as rhetorical situation. University of Kansas.
- Goodwin, A. E. (1937). The high school newspaper. Kansas State College of Agricultural and Applied Science.
- Gordon, G. L. (1973). A status of journalism education and mass media communication education in Michigan secondary schools. Central Michigan University. (Adv.: Thomas R. Rood)
- Granberg, G. G. (1932). The present status, trends, and objectives of the high school annual. Colorado State Teachers College.
- Gray, M. B. (1976). A survey of journalism education in Utah high schools. University of Utah. (Adv.: George Everett)
- Greenberg, H. L. (1972). A study of attitudes of principals, advisers and editors toward stories offered for publication in Northeastern Ohio high school newspapers. Kent State University.
- Gregory, A. M. (1928). High school publications. University of Idaho.
- Gregory, L. (1971). Controls exercised by advisers of Indiana high school newspapers. Indiana University.
- Griffith, C. A. (1970). A survey of Indiana newspaper editors to determine their attitudes concerning secondary school journalism instruction and practices and its ability to prepare secondary school students for future employment on commercial newspaper staffs. Ball State University. (Adv.: Louis E. Ingelhart)
- Grubb, D. R. (1956). A critique of the status of journalism in American public secondary schools. University of Utah. (Adv.: Paul C. Fawley)
- Haddick, M. R. (1957). A study of common weaknesses in Texas high school newspapers with

- an analysis of their nature and causes. University of Texas at Austin.
- Hadfield, R. W. (1978). The status of student press freedom in Nebraska's high schools. University of Nebraska- Lincoln.
- Haen, J. (1968). The status of journalism in the junior high schools of Kansas. Kansas State University. (Adv.: Del Brinkman)
- Hahn, P. M. (2005). Introducing high school students to TV production: A survey and curriculum. Kutztown University of Pennsylvania.
- Hall, R. H. (1946). Subjects taught in the high schools of Texas. University of Texas.
- Hammel, T. C. (1959). An evaluation of various high school press associations. University of Missouri.
- Harris, D. L. (1970). An investigative study of the extent to which high school publications in Idaho are subject to content control. Brigham Young University. (Adv.: Rulon L. Bradley)
- Harvey, T. M. (1949). The high school newspaper. East Texas State Teachers College.
- Hauth, L. F. (1966). A study of publications advisers in small high schools of southern Illinois. Southern Illinois University. (Adv.: W. Manion Rice)
- Havron, D. (1982). The Ball State summer workshops in journalism, yearbook division. Ball State University. (Adv.: Earl Conn)
- Hawthorne, B. F. (1989). Job satisfaction among Texas high school journalism teachers. University of Texas- Austin. (Adv.: Wayne A. Danielson)
- Hay, H. W. (1926). An analysis and evaluation of the high school magazine. University of Pittsburgh.
- Hayes, B. D. (2002). A manual for creating a design style handbook for high school newspaper advisers. Ball State University. (Adv.: Marilyn Weaver)
- Haynes, S. W. (1982). The relationship of selected high schools and student characteristics with scores achieved on the ACT assessment in the seven great plains states. The University of Iowa.
- Heatherly, O. (1966). Qualifications required to teach journalism in high schools in Missouri and surrounding states. University of Missouri. (Adv.: William H. Taft)
- Henley, D. C. (1974). A study of the educational and professional backgrounds of journalism teachers in California public high schools. United States International University. (Adv.: James M. Thrasher)
- Henry, T. M. (2005). Media influences explored: What high school students say about the power of newspapers, television and magazines. University of Maryland, College Park. (Adv.: Katherine C. McAdams)
- Hepker, R. (1989). The journalism advisers' hotline: The first year. Iowa State University. (Adv.: Walter Niebauer)
- Herb, C. M. (1957). A study of the problems involved in the advising of publications and the releasing of publicity in selected Ohio high schools. Ohio University.
- Herring, J. S. (1974). First Amendment attitudes and knowledge: A survey of Texas high school

- principals, newspaper advisers and student editors. University of Texas-Austin.
- Herrman, A. E. (1990). A study of use of desktop publishing for Indiana high school publications. Ball State University. (Adv.: Mark N. Popovich)
- Herron, M. J. (2003). A study of curriculum at accredited journalism schools to determine which skills and theories related to media convergence are valued and taught. Ball State University. (Adv.: Marilyn Weaver)
- Hershner, L. L. (1995). Rethinking scholastic journalism: A participatory paradigm for introductory and advanced journalism courses. University of Nebraska- Lincoln.
- Hertel, C. A. (1940). A workbook for senior high school journalism students. University of Colorado.
- Hicks, J. L. (1949). Journalism in the high schools of Washington state 1949. University of Washington.
- Hill, D. (1986). Publications codes and freedom of the student press: A first amendment analysis. California State University, Fullerton. (Adv.: Rick D. Pullen)
- Hince, T. E. (1972). An analysis of the editorial content and policy of twenty selected high school newspapers in Pennsylvania. University of Pittsburgh.
- Hines, B. (1981). A history of the Columbia Scholastic Press Association, 1924-1981. University of Maryland. (Adv.: John C. Carr)
- Hoffman, D. E. (1980). The first amendment rights of high school newspapers in Virginia. The University of North Carolina at Greensboro.
- Hoffman, L. M. (1996). Social and academic priorities in American high schools: What students and their yearbooks tell us. University of Maryland. (Adv.: Vivienne Collinson)
- Hohlbein-Koechley, L. A. (1999). Discovery in the newswriting process: A protocol analysis case study of two high school student journalists. Bowling Green State University.
- Hoist, W. H. (1928). The analysis of the junior high school newspaper as an extra-curricular activity. University of Southern California.
- Holbrook, W. L. (1972). A study of attitudes toward language usage of high school and college newspaper advisers along with secondary newspaper editors. Ball State University. (Adv.: Max D. Smith)
- Holcombe, G. B. (2002). Real-world writing: Defining the pedagogical benefits of a student-generated, in-class newspaper. California State University, Dominguez Hills. (Adv.: Ages Yamada)
- Holder, W. G. (1935). A survey of high school newspapers, high school journalism courses, and high school journalism teachers. Indiana University.
- Holland, H. E. (1967). Current status of the high school newspapers in South Carolina. University of South Carolina. (Adv.: Reid H. Montgomery)
- Hollingsworth, M. (1975). A survey of Illinois public high school top award-winning newspapers and yearbooks. Southern Illinois University. (Adv.: Robert Trager)
- Holloway, M. L. G. (1964). High school students' attitudes toward journalism as a career. University of Mississippi.

- Hollowell, M. L. (1962). Survey to determine the design and implementation of a mass communications course in the high school. University of Florida. (Adv.: Kenneth A. Christiansen)
- Holweger, K. L. (1992). High school journalism advisors' perceptions of control over student newspapers. California State University- Fresno. (Adv.: Paul Adams)
- Hoppe, J. R. (1963). A study of the role of advertising in meeting production costs of Oregon high school newspapers, 1961-1963. University of Oregon.
- Hopkins, M. G. (1982). Are Arkansas public high school newspapers censored? University of Arkansas- Little Rock. (Adv.: Leonard A. Granato)
- Howell, R. L. (1929). The high school newspaper. University of Missouri.
- Hsieh, M.-C. (1982). Newspaper reading habits of selected southern Illinois high school students. Southern Illinois University at Carbondale.
- Huckeby, J. A. (1972). A mini-course plan to include journalism in the junior high school. Ball State University. (Adv.: Louis E. Ingelhart)
- Huff, B. M. (1928). A study of high school newspapers. University of Kansas.
- Hunt, D. L. (1972). News content of fifty-nine Texas high school newspapers. East Texas State University. (Adv.: W.J. Bell)
- Hunt, J. (1939). The status of the mimeographed secondary school newspaper in the state of Colorado. Colorado State College.
- Ingelhart, L. E. (1953). Journalism in the American teachers' college. University of Missouri.
- Ingelhart, L. E. (1947). The teaching of journalism in Colorado high schools. Colorado State College.
- Irby, J. R. (1995). The tensions of collaboration: Spoken dialogues about revision in the high school newspaper production classroom. University of Washington. (Adv.: Timothy C. Standal)
- Irwin, H. G. (1928). A study to determine the place of high school publications in the junior high schools. University of Southern California.
- Jackson, J. (1955). The Interscholastic League Press Conference and its influence on high school journalism in Texas. University of Texas.
- Jacobs, L. E. (1977). Freedom of the press and student publications. Iowa State University.
- Jardine, W. C. (1933). Remedial methods for common faults in high school journalism. Indiana State Teachers College. (Adv.: Leslie Meeks)
- Jenson, J. (2007). Teaching high school journalism in South Dakota: A case study of 10 veteran female educators. (Adv.: Lyle Olson)
- Joffrion, R. D. (1975). The status of journalism in selected east Texas high schools. Stephen F. Austin State University.
- Johnson, D. M. (1991). Alabama public middle and secondary school principals' perceptions of selected First Amendment student rights. University of Alabama. (Adv.: Lanny Gamble)
- Johnstone, K. H. (1964). An exploratory study of student news bureaus at the secondary school level. University of Oregon. (Adv.: Galen R. Rarick)

- Jones, G. (1935). Extra-curricular activities in relation to the curriculum. Teachers College, Columbia University.
- Jungblut, J. A. (1981). Northern Illinois high school newspapers: A comparison of format and design based on the school's community. Northern Illinois University. (Adv.: Irvan Kummerfeldt)
- Kahn, R. O. (1977). Publications handbook for Hanover Central High School. Ball State University. (Adv.: Ruth Iliff)
- Kahookele, L. M. (1992). The adoption of desktop publishing in Iowa high school journalism. Iowa State University.
- Kauffman, J. R. (1982). An examination and comparison of the present condition of the downriver Detroit, Michigan school press to the findings of the commission of inquiry into high school journalism. Ball State University. (Adv.: Louis E. Ingelhart)
- Kearney, S. J. (1935). A survey of the financing of high school newspapers in South Dakota. University of South Dakota.
- Kelsey, M. J. (1971). The opinions of student newspaper editors on racial news coverage, editorial page content, and press freedom of the high school newspaper. Indiana University.
- Kennedy, P. W. (1964) Newspaper reporting as a career: Attitudes of a selected group of male high school editors. Pennsylvania State University. (Adv.: Robert M. Pockrass)
- Kidd, E. (2004). Luring the young: Have attempts to "grow" young newspaper readers been successful? University of Missouri- Columbia. (Adv.: Charles Davis)
- Kimble, M. A. (1970). Development of a photography manual for high school yearbook editors. Ball State University. (Adv.: Louis E. Ingelhart)
- King, M. R. (1971). Attitudes of administrators and publications advisers toward journalism education and school publications in the secondary schools of South Carolina. University of South Carolina. (Adv.: Perry J. Ashley)
- King, T. J. (1974). Freedom and control of student publications in the American high school. Kent State University. (Adv.: Roger M. Shaw)
- King, Y. H. (1963). Attitudes toward journalism: Journalism teachers and/or publications advisers and students in West Virginia high schools (9-12, 10-12). West Virginia University. (Adv.: Guy H. Stewart/Quintus C. Wilson)
- Kirek, M. P. (1971). Teaching aids for the high school journalism teacher. Kent State University.
- Kleine, G. A. W. (1959). Secondary school journalism as viewed by 400 Missouri principals. University of Missouri- Columbia.
- Klug, J. H. (2001). The use of popular film in the secondary journalism class. Truman State University. (Adv.: Karon Speckman)
- Knott, D. L. (1981). Treatment in selected high school journalism textbooks of the First Amendment as it related to the rights of students to express themselves in print. University of Toledo. (Adv.: Mary Jo Henning)

- Knowles, J. H. (1974). A study of courses in methods of teaching secondary school journalism with a proposed ideal methods course. University of Kansas. (Adv.: Oscar M. Haugh)
- Komandosky, S. W. (1981). The Interscholastic League Press Conference: A history, 1924-1980. North Texas State University. (Adv.: Douglas P. Starr)
- Koppenhaver, G. R. (1979). A school page and its adult readers: A readership study of Time-Plain Dealer subscribers. Iowa State University. (Adv.: J.K. Hvistendahl)
- Kotarski, J. (2008). School-based community television. Wayne State University.
- Kowalski, D. D. (1973). A symbolic content analysis of high school underground newspaper and related legal decision. California State University, Northridge.
- Koziol, R. V. (1979). Reasons for high school students' course and career choices in journalism. University of Maryland, College Park. (Adv.: W. Lawrence Patrick)
- Kozma, P. M. (1953). The status of the teaching of journalism in the high schools of South Carolina. University of South Carolina. (Adv.: J.M. Daniel)
- Kraus, L. L. (1974). An analysis of the effect of censorship on the high school newspaper. Southern Methodist University.
- Kropf, G. S. (1932). An analysis of junior high school newspapers. The University of Chicago.
- Kruger, W. E. (2002). Student press rights in Indiana public high schools: A survey of Indiana public school principals' attitudes and actions toward the student press. Ball State University. (Adv.: Joseph R. McKinney)
- Kuppig, D. K. (1980). A study of perceptions of advisors concerning decision-making in high school yearbooks. University of Nebraska- Lincoln.
- Lamoreux, S. (1960). A comparison: The Idaho and the Oregon high school journalism adviser. University of Oregon.
- Landini, A. L. (1977). A study of the professional and educational backgrounds of high school journalism teachers and publications advisers in Tennessee. Murray State University. (Advs.: Carl J. Denbow/Robert J. McGaughey III)
- Lane, M. G. (1926). A study of the educational value of the high school annual. University of California.
- Lane, R. W. (1992). Beyond the schoolhouse gate: Free speech and the inculcation of values. The University of Wisconsin- Madison. (Adv.: Donald A. Downs)
- Langley, R. R. (1965). Newswriting one: A programmed lesson. Syracuse University.
- Langworthy, K. (1950). A survey of the school paper in boys' public high schools, including a collection of suggestions with the aim of making the paper more interesting and worthwhile to the students. Canisius College.
- Lopata, M. H. (1959). A study of journalism as taught in Catholic high schools. Marquette University.
- Larsen, M. J. (1963). A survey of journalism in Utah public secondary schools. University of Utah. (Adv.: Milton C. Hollstein)
- Larson, D. A. (1968). Teaching journalism to the junior high school student. University of Texas- Austin. (Adv.: DeWitt C. Reddick)

- Lattimore, L. A. (2001). Quest for freedom: Fighting censorship in the scholastic press. University of Alabama. (Adv.: James G. Stovall)
- Laub, S. M. (1989). The status of student publications in the public secondary schools. University of Missouri- Columbia. (Adv.: Floyd G. Delon)
- Lauffer, K. A. (1997). Examining the state of high school journalism in Michigan nine years after Hazelwood v. Kuhlmeier. Michigan State University.
- La Conto, R. L. (1963). A study of the journalism programs of fifty Ohio secondary schools. Ohio University. (Adv.: Loren J. Hortin)
- Learned, R. E. (1924). A study of student publications of the rural high schools of California. Stanford University.
- Lee, N.L. (1979). Financial and business management for the high school yearbook adviser and business staff. Ball State University. (Adv.: Marilyn Kimble)
- Lighthart, C. E. (1969). Journalism in high school: A concentration of journalistic problems of the smaller city school and county school. Ball State University. (Adv.: Louis E. Ingelhart)
- Linley, M. (1998). More efficient yearbook production. Ashland University.
- Littell, R. R. (1993). Free expression rights of students in newspapers and other curricular activities: Legal analysis and study of recognition of those rights by selected Ohio high school principals. Miami University. (Adv.: Nelda Cameron-McCabe)
- Lopez, K. A. (2008). Student speech rights: First Amendment implications for high school students on popular online social networks, MySpace and Facebook. University of Florida. (Adv.: Laurence Alexander)
- Love, R. F. (2010). A wired world: A primer on electronic research, Wikipedia, social networking, and Web journalism. University of Nebraska- Lincoln. (Adv.: Mary Kay Quinian)
- Lovellette, N. (1933). A study of the problems of high-school newspapers in Illinois. University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.
- Ludwig, C. L. G. (1975). A good high school newspaper: What the students want and what the rating services require. University of Arizona.
- Lueck, C. E. (1931). An analysis of five hundred thirty high school annuals. University of Chicago.
- Lum, P. A. (1962). High school journalism instruction and career choices: An exploratory study. University of California- Berkeley.
- Luna, A. L. (1993). An analysis of attitudes toward students' first amendment expressive activities within public colleges and universities. University of Alabama.
- Lynch, A. C. (1975). The editorial content of high school newspapers. Ball State University. (Adv.: Louis E. Ingelhart)
- Macksam, J. E. (1963). A study of high school journalism surveyed in works of authors in communication studies and a plan for operating a newspaper and journalism course in the public high school of Flandreau, South Dakota. South Dakota State College of

- Agriculture and Mechanic Arts.
- MacKenzie, S. M. (1998). First person singular: Reflection and the student journalist. University of Michigan.
- Madison, E. (2012). Journalistic learning: Rethinking and redefining language arts curricula. University of Oregon. (Adv.: Kim Sheehan)
- Madurski, M. P. (2002). Free speech stuck at the schoolhouse gate: A study of censorship in student-produced high school newspapers. Ohio University.
- Magruder, R. C. (1989). Examining the functions of graphics/art work in literary magazines. Ohio State University.
- Maksl, A. M. (2012). On parents, peers, administrators, and advisers: Developing a system to understand self-censorship of controversial topics in the high school press. University of Missouri- Columbia. (Adv.: Charles N. Davis)
- Manton, T. J. (1951). Major objectives and teaching techniques of journalism in Texas high schools. Southern Methodist University.
- Martin, D. R. (1968). A study of photography in Indiana high school newspapers. Indiana University.
- Martin, R. O. (1959). A “profile” of the Oregon scholastic press member-adviser: His role assayed with regard to declining college journalism enrollments. University of Oregon.
- Martin, R. R. (1953). Teaching high school journalism by the laboratory method. University of Utah.
- Martindale, M. J. (1977). An analysis of how high school students perceive arts coverage in newspapers. Ball State University. (Adv.: Mark N. Popovich)
- Mase, J. R. (1955). A testing program for a high school journalism course. Ohio State University.
- Maurer, D. J. (1978). Producing and financing central Illinois high school newspapers. University of Missouri- Columbia.
- Mayer, B. (1970). An evaluation of the total journalistic experience of the high school newspaper editor. Ball State University. (Adv.: Louis E. Ingelhart)
- Mays, R. P. (1992). Florida high school newspaper adviser attitudes on scholastic press freedom following the Supreme Court’s Hazelwood decision. University of Florida. (Adv.: Julie E. Dodd)
- McAnally, R. W. (1952). Guidance through the high school newspaper. Texas College of Arts and Industries (no Texas A&M- Kingsville).
- McCarthy, M. L. (1939). A survey of the publication practices for 915 high school newspapers as exemplified on the N.S.P.A. critical survey of 1937. University of Minnesota.
- McClintock, C. H. (1962). The high school newspaper as seen by administrators and advisers. Indiana University. (Adv.: Gretchen A. Kemp)
- McCoy, M. L. (1933). Writing for the high school paper. Columbia University.
- McCune, C. C. (1974). Preparation of the high school journalism teacher: Certification requirements related to teacher needs. West Virginia University. (Adv.: Edward C.

- Smith)
- McCurdy, E. B. (1953). A manual for use in Montana high school yearbook production. Montana State University.
- McDonald, S. M. (1999). Factors and issues affecting press freedoms in private high schools. University of South Carolina. (Adv.: Bruce E. Konkle)
- McFadgen, N. R. (1969). The status of journalism in North Dakota high schools. South Dakota State University. (Adv.: George H. Phillips)
- McGarry, M. D. (1929). Curriculum and methods in journalism in B 11. University of Southern California.
- McKay, E. A. (1953). The purpose, content, and value of the high school mimeographed newspaper. University of North Dakota.
- McKee, K. B. (1992). High school principals and the student press: Functions, procedures and regulation. University of Georgia. (Adv.: Kent R. Middleton)
- McKenna, B. J. (1998). "Getting to yes": Teachers and their choices regarding tolerance. State University of New York at Albany.
- McKinley, M. A. (1984). A curriculum and guide for yearbook publication. University of Toledo.
- McKoy, D. L. (2001). Inside school-based enterprise: Productive environments and enterprising minds. University of California, Berkeley. (Adv.: David Sern)
- McLaughlin, M. J. (1950). A guide to teaching journalism in the senior high schools. Rhode Island College.
- McMillin, C. H. (1985). A history of the Mississippi Scholastic Press Association. University of Mississippi. (Adv.: Will Norton, Jr.)
- McNamara, E. J. (1981). The development of student freedom of expression rights in the state of New Jersey. Rutgers University.
- Michaelsohn, W. E. (1929). The school newspaper in North Dakota. University of North Dakota.
- Millane, J. H. (1940). Trends in high-school yearbooks. University of Pennsylvania.
- Miller, L. J. (1993). Disability and the media: Attitudes and news choices of high school journalists regarding persons with disabilities. Iowa State University. (Adv.: Jane W. Peterson)
- Miller, S. S. (1995). Institutional factors that influence participation in a pilot project: A study of the Franklin County high school journalism exchange electronic bulletin board service. Ohio State University. (Adv.: Lee Becker)
- Mills, F. W. (1933). Teaching journalism in secondary schools. University of Washington.
- Milner, J. W. (1955). A study of objectives of forty-seven Oklahoma high school newspapers. University of Oklahoma.
- Mitchell, E. S. (1932). Trends in journalistic instruction and supervision in the secondary schools of California. University of Southern California.
- Mock, A. A. (1922). A study of high school publications. Indiana University.

- Mook, L. D. (1978). Designing and testing a high school programmed instructional unit in headline writing. California State University- Fullerton. (Adv.: James Alexander)
- Moore, J. N. (1955). An examination of methods used to finance student newspapers and yearbooks in Montana high schools during 1951-1952. Montana State University.
- Montgomery, R. H. (1938). High school journalism in South Carolina. University of South Carolina. (Adv.: Orin F. Crow)
- Morelock, C. F. (1962). Journalism education in Kansas high schools: A study of courses, teachers, and newspaper advisers. University of Kansas.
- Morrissey, P. J. (1973). A theory of the student literary magazine: A purposeful device for functional English in junior high school. University of Sarasota. (Adv.: Robert Treanor)
- Morse, G. E. (1955). A critical survey of yearbook production with recommendations for aid and improvement. University of Idaho.
- Moseley, P. A. (1972). An examination of and proposals for implementation of a high school journalism program. University of Texas. (Adv.: DeWitt C. Reddick)
- Moss, A. M. (2005). A content analysis of how staff diversity affects diversity in high school yearbooks. Ball State University. (Adv.: Marilyn Weaver)
- Muldoon, M. M. (1934). The construction of a scale for measuring the editorials of senior high school newspapers. The University of Chicago.
- Nault, J. T. (1976). Quality high school journalism: Program principles and publication guidelines governed by press law. University of Nevada- Reno. (Adv.: LaRue W. Gilleland)
- Naylor, F. W. (1962). A survey of high school press associations. University of Kansas.
- Neilan, J. A. (1999). Desktop publishing and photo manipulation: A survey of Indiana high school publications advisors. Ball State University. (Adv.: Mark Popovich)
- Nell, E. (1934). A study of advertising in representative high school newspapers. Northwestern University.
- Nelson, D. L. (1929). High school publications. Stanford University.
- Nelson, R. A. (1976). A study of the motivations of high school students to careers in journalism. University of Wisconsin- Madison.
- Nichols, C. E. (1987). Meeting yearbook deadlines: An analysis of high school programs, sales representatives, and yearbook publishing companies. Ball State University. (Adv.: Marilyn Weaver)
- Nichols, J. E. (1976). Federal constitutional protection of freedom of the high school and college student press. The University of Wisconsin- Madison.
- Nichols, S. Y. (1964). Journalism instruction and activity in Wisconsin public high schools. University of Wisconsin. (Adv.: Bruce H. Westley)
- Niday, D. M. (1984). A study of a journalism writing assessment as tested in two Iowa high schools. Iowa State University. (Adv.: J.K. Hvistendahl)
- Nissen, S. B. (1931). Newspapers as socializing agents for the school: A study of selected newspapers in South Dakota with reference to their news content for the school year

- 1928-1929. University of Minnesota.
- Nixon, O. F. (1922). Student publications in the high schools on the accredited list of the North Central Association. University of Chicago.
- Nolan, W. (1961). Organization and teaching of the beginning journalism course in Bay Area high schools. University of California, Berkeley.
- Novak, T. J. (1978). Direct market segmentation applied to high school yearbook sales. Northern Illinois University. (Adv.: A.Z. Bass)
- Novek, E. M. (1994). Newsmaking, knowledge construction, and self-determination: A community newspaper as an empowerment strategy for African American high school students. University of Pennsylvania. (Adv.: Oscar H. Gandy)
- Nussman, D. Z. (1933). Journalism in the senior high schools of Los Angeles County. University of Southern California.
- Olsen, J. W. (1949). High school yearbooks: A working manual for teachers and students. Teachers College, Columbia University.
- Ott, M. M. (1930). A high school yearbook finance survey. University of Pittsburgh.
- Palmer, R. A. (1968). Values and objectives in the teaching of secondary school journalism as found in selected periodical literature, from 1958 to 1967. Catholic University of America.
- Parramore, J. R. (1989). An analysis of school board guidelines for high school-sponsored student publications after the "Hazelwood School District v. Kuhlmeier" decision of the United States Supreme Court. University of Colorado.
- Pearson, G. P. (1966). A study of journalism activities in Minnesota public high schools, with special reference to influences bearing upon the work of journalism teachers and advisers. University of Minnesota. (Adv.: Edwin Emery)
- Peck, G. S. (1948). A course of study in journalism for Montana high schools. University of Montana.
- Penn, M. A. (1974). A study of the methods of financing printed Texas high school newspapers. East Texas State University. (Adv.: W.J. Bell)
- Perkins, C. A. (1974). The role of Ball State's journalism workshop in producing minority journalists. Ball State University. (Adv.: Mark N. Popovich)
- Peterson, G. J. (1988). Student activities: An analysis of educators' attitudes. University of Minnesota.
- Peterson, J. W. (1987). A study of the co-orientation of high school principals, journalism teachers, and local news media representatives in selected Iowa communities. Iowa State University.
- Pettibone, J. F. (1963). An analysis of editorial content in secondary school student newspapers. Ohio State University. (Adv.: Paul Barton)
- Pflieger, M. C. (2008). An investigation of censorship of printed and line student publications by high school administrators. Kutztown University of Pennsylvania. (Adv. Joseph Chuk)
- Pfister, R. J. (1954). The involvement of high school students in the development of a

- yearbook: The implications of this activity for art education. Ohio State University.
- Phelps, L. E. (1973). Student newspaper production practices in California high schools. California State University, Long Beach.
- Phillips, K. D. (1992). Free to speak? The first amendment and North Carolina high school journalism. University of North Carolina- Chapel Hill. (Adv.: William S. Palmer)
- Phillips, K. D. (1988). Freedom of expression for high school journalists: A case study of selected North Carolina public schools. University of North Carolina- Chapel Hill. (Adv.: Margaret Blanchard)
- Pickett, F. (1935). Purposes, content, and management of the high school newspaper in Texas. Texas Technological College, Lubbock.
- Pierik, M. G. ((1934). An analysis of the content of Catholic high school newspapers in Illinois. Loyola University Chicago.
- Popovich, M. N. (1968). A study of bookkeeping practices and procedures employed by Indiana high school yearbooks and newspapers. Ball State University. (Adv.: Louis E. Ingelhart)
- Pratt, J. R. (1978). A study of the legal aspects of freedom of speech in the school-sponsored student press at the secondary school level. The University of Alabama. (Adv.: Bruce Peseau)
- Prendergast, J. J. (1940). A study of business practices that have been developed in the publication and financing of high school newspapers in Washington, Oregon and California. University of Washington.
- Presley, R. H. (1928). Methods of conducting a high school paper. University of Southern California.
- Probert, E. (1931). Status of journalism in the senior high schools of California. University of Southern California.
- Provost, R. L. (1956). Discovering the problems, interests, and needs of students by examination of the high school yearbook. Drake University.
- Ralston, N. A. (2002). An investigation of the relationships between high school environment and the students' knowledge and attitudes regarding free expression. University of Missouri- Columbia. (Advs.: Ed Lambeth/Rob Logan)
- Rasmussen, P. A. (1979). California high school newspapers and the law. California State University- Fullerton. (Adv.: Rick D. Pullen)
- Rau, M. (1952). A survey of the financing of high school newspapers in South Dakota. University of South Dakota.
- Raymond, J. O. (1972). The status of administrative censorship of, and attitudes toward, the scholastic press in public secondary schools in Kansas: A survey and case studies of how controversial issues are covered. University of Kansas. (Adv.: Del Brinkman)
- Rea, A. A. (1927). A study of student handbooks for high schools. University of Chicago.
- Reardon, H. M. (1934). A comparative study of trends in the teaching of journalism in three cities of northeastern Kansas. University of Kansas.

- Redford, E. H. (1939). A critical study of the curriculum of high school journalism. Stanford University.
- Redford, E. H. (1930). A study of journalism in American secondary schools. Stanford University.
- Reichard, M. K. (1930). Organizing the school paper as an English composition project. Columbia University.
- Reynolds, D. M. (1981). A suggested course outline for a high school mass media class. University of Kansas. (Adv.: Dorothy Bowles)
- Reynolds, G. (1952). A study of curriculum methods of journalism education in high school. University of Utah.
- Rhudy, V. G. (1991). A survey of existing and proposed state legislation protecting high school students' rights to free expression and a free press, and a proposal for such legislation in West Virginia. Marshall University. (Adv.: George T. Arnold)
- Rhudy, V. G. (2004). A study of the relationship between the state student free expression laws and the perceived scholastic journalism practices in public high schools in the United States. West Virginia University. (Adv.- Michael Cunningham)
- Rhule, I. G. (1976). A survey of the journalism curriculums and student publication programs in a selected list of junior high schools with an enrollment of 400 or more students in the state of Indiana. Ball State University. (Adv.: Earl L. Conn)
- Rice, W. M. (1967). A survey of determinant factors in the choice of journalism as a career. Southern Illinois University at Carbondale. (Adv.: Bryce W. Rucker)
- Riley, L. A. (1976). Team: An experimental high school sports magazine. California State University- Fullerton.
- Robey, E. J. (1965). A readership survey of the Crestwood High School papers, including students' attitudes toward specific types of newspaper items. Winona State College.
- Robinson, J. (1994). The history of the Florida Scholastic Press Association: 1945-1993. University of Florida. (Adv.: Julie E. Dodd)
- Rodgers, L. (1992). Case studies: English teachers turned journalists. University of South Carolina. (Adv.: Leara Rhodes)
- Roeben, J. (1965). Newspaper promotion directed toward secondary school students. St. Bonaventure University.
- Rollins, R. A. (1971). Teaching endorsement in journalism: A survey of Tennessee high school newspaper advisers. University of Tennessee. (Adv.: Kelly Leiter)
- Roop, J. E. (1931). High school journalism: A study on the larger public high schools of Missouri, Kansas, and Oklahoma. University of Missouri- Columbia.
- Root, D. G. (1991). Arkansas journalism education: A survey of continuing education needs, wants and offerings, and opinions on state requirements. Oklahoma State University. (Adv.: Charles Fleming)
- Root, J. R. (1991). A Delphi study of the predicted effects of video yearbooks on high school journalism programs. Oklahoma State University. (Adv.: Charles Fleming)

- Roppa, K. M. (1992). The U.S. constitution and the student: A decade of change. University of Pittsburgh. (Adv.: Sean Hughes)
- Ross, D. (1952). W. G. Bleyer and the development of journalism education. University of Wisconsin- Madison.
- Russell, W. D. (1969). Teaching journalism and publishing a newspaper: A simultaneous project. East Texas State University. (Adv.: W.J. Bell)
- Rutherford-Black, C. M. (1993). Conformity in dress: Analysis of visual representation in high school yearbook portraits. University of Minnesota. (Adv.: Joanne B. Eicher)
- Sands, G. (1967). A profile of Oklahoma high school yearbooks. University of Oklahoma. (Adv.: C. Joe Holland)
- Saville, A. K. (1983). The effect of perceptions of student press role and other factors on attitudes toward student press freedom. University of Maryland. (Adv.: Barbara B. Hines)
- Scarborough, A. (1973). Profile of a high school yearbook. Bowling Green State University.
- Scattergood, K. K. (1979). A survey of award-winning high school newspapers in Texas. North Texas State University. (Adv.: Tae Guk Kim)
- Schaefer, L. L. (1976). A policy manual for a high school yearbook photography staff. Ball State University. (Adv.: Robert L. Heintzelman)
- Schmidt, C. P. (1975). A study of the professional and educational background of high school journalism teachers and advisers in Wyoming. University of Wyoming. (Adv.: David C. Henley)
- Schmiech, H. L. P. (1971). A study of the relationship between the principal-adviser-staff interaction process and the thematic content and intensity of coverage of the high school press. University of Houston.
- Schneider, B. P. (1999). Administrative control of the student press in Illinois and its impact on a student newspaper's internal and external credibility. University of Chicago- Loyola. (Adv.: Janis Fine)
- Schlosser, W. (1955). An investigation of the practices and policies of teaching drama, journalism, radio, and speech in the public elementary, junior high school, and senior high schools in the state of Oregon. University of Oregon.
- Schraum, B. (2010). Trained to censor?: A study of student expression issues in Missouri principal preparation programs. University of Missouri- Columbia. (Adv.: Charles N. Davis)
- Schroeder, V. H. (1948). An index to high school journalism. Boston University.
- Schuler, M. P. (1931). The status of the high school newspaper as a curricular activity in the published works on high school journalism. Denver University.
- Scott, A. (1955). Secondary school journalism: Current practices and trends. The University of Texas at Austin.
- Secora, C. L. (1969). The role of editorials in Missouri secondary schools. University of Missouri- Columbia.
- Seyle, E. G. (1930). Student publications in the high schools of South Carolina. University of

- South Carolina. (Adv.: Patterson Wardlaw)
- Shaner, J. G. (1969). Scholastic journalism's influences in college. University of Missouri. (Adv.: William H. Taft)
- Shanken Skwersky, S. (1989). The dialogical imaginings of adolescent and youth: Discourses on gender, language, and power in student literary magazines from 1900 to 1929. University of Pennsylvania. (Adv.: Carroll Smith-Rosenberg)
- Shannon, R. W. (1965). History of the Oklahoma Interscholastic Press Association: The first fifty years, 1916-1965. University of Oklahoma.
- Sheetz, A. R. (1963). A profile of the Oregon high school yearbook, its adviser, and staff. University of Oregon. (Adv.: Roy Paul Nelson)
- Shufelberger, D. C. (1958). Present status of newspapers in the curricula of 124 representative high schools in Kansas. University of Missouri.
- Simons, P. R. (1974). Freedom of the press in high school newspaper and yearbooks: A status report 1973-1974. Kansas State University.
- Singletary, I. R. (1998). South Carolina superintendents' and secondary educators' knowledge of school law as it relates to selected areas of student rights. South Carolina State University. (Adv.: Walter Childs)
- Slack, J. F. (1938). A survey of student publications in the smaller high schools of the state of Indiana. Indiana State Teachers College.
- Slider, S. (2005). Confessions of yearbook addict: A guide for new or confused advisers. University of Nebraska. (Adv.: Charlyne Berens)
- Smith, S. L. (1971). Kansas high school journalism: Journalism workshop design. Kansas State University. (Adv.: Deryl Leaming)
- Smyre, S. H. & R. L. Davison. (1945). Forty years of curriculum development in the high schools of Texas. University of Texas.
- Snyder, G. L. (1929). Making the high school annual. University of Southern California.
- Sowa, W. E. (1950). A study of teachers of journalism in the American public high school. Northwestern University.
- Sparacio, S. (1968). The high school newspaper advisor: A comparison of the criteria of authorities concerning responsibilities with the reported responsibilities of advisors in secondary schools with 1,000 or more enrollment in New York state. Teachers College, Columbia University. (Adv.: David B. Austin)
- Sparling, G.B. (2011). Predicting burnout in high-school journalism teachers: An exploratory study. University of North Texas. (Adv.: Koji Fuse)
- Sponseller, E. H. (1976). Legal aspects concerning teachers' first amendment rights of freedom of speech and expression within the public school classroom. Temple University.
- Springer, E. P. (1940). A study of student publications in the public high schools of New Mexico. University of New Mexico.
- Stallings, M. E. (1930). A course of study in journalism to be used in the central high school, Washington, D.C. George Washington University.

- Stallworth, F. H. (1982). Current trends in teaching composition in selected Florida high schools: Successes and failures. Florida State University.
- Stewart, K. R. (1970). Circulation and readership of high school newspapers. Ball State University. (Adv.: Louis E. Ingelhart)
- Stewart, M. (1933). Measurements of the quality of the conventions: News story found in high school newspapers. University of West Virginia.
- Stidman, D. D. (1969). Staff selection practices of student publications advisers. Idaho State University.
- Stine, M. (1975). Speech and academic freedom in the secondary schools: An emerging First Amendment right. Southern Illinois University (Adv.: Robert Trager)
- Stingley, J. J. (1978). An examination of high school photography classes offered as part of the regular curriculum in Iowa, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Wyoming. South Dakota State University. (Adv.: Woodrow P. Wentzy)
- Stockdale, B. S. (1973). A study of qualifications of a randomly selected sample of Kentucky high school journalism teachers. Murray State University. (Adv.: J. Neil Woodruff)
- Stockdell, H. E. (1997). Hazelwood v. Kuhlmeier: Super Court decision provides new possibilities for scholastic press. Butler University.
- Stolteben, H. (1935) Journalism in high school: A textbook. State University of Iowa.
- Stone, M. M. (1934). A survey of secondary journalism in the central states. Northwestern University.
- Strainic, J. M. (2007). High school publications demonstrate higher quality when students control content. Kent State University. (Adv.: Timothy D. Smith)
- Sturgeon, V. (1945). Duplicated high school annuals. Butler University.
- Sullivan, M. M. (1932). Training of teachers of journalism in secondary schools. Teachers College, Columbia University.
- Sveum, C. J. (1976). Analysis of the adviser's opinion of journalism publications serving the scholastic audience. Texas Tech University.
- Swihart, H. A. (1973). English electives in Iowa high schools. A survey. Drake University.
- Sypher, R. M. (1941). A study of the management of school magazines in representative Pennsylvania high schools. Duke University.
- Teel, C. A. (1967). An investigation of the need for a course in mass communication in the high school curriculum. Ohio University. (Adv.: Ralph Izard)
- Thomas, G. G. (1946). Journalism in South Carolina colleges- 1946. University of Wisconsin.
- Thompson, L. (2002). Journalism teacher certification in Indiana. Ball State University (Adv.: Marilyn Weaver)
- Thompson, T. C. (1972). Publications guidelines for secondary schools. University of Arizona.
- Thomure, L. R. (1929). Formulation of score cards for rating junior high school newspapers and magazines. University of Chicago.
- Tiedeman, H. G. (1933). Current practice in financing high school publications in Minnesota. State University of Iowa.

- Tischler, M. S. (1949). A study of scholastic organizations offering aid to publications in the public white secondary schools of Virginia. University of Virginia.
- Trigg, M. (1977). The first amendment and public high school journalism in Oklahoma. University of Oklahoma.
- Utsler, M. R. (1981). Using communication apprehension and other sociological variables as a method for journalism career prediction and development of curriculum and instruction. University of Missouri- Columbia.
- Urquhart, C. A. (1932). Financing the high school newspaper. University of Southern California.
- Varner, D. S. (2005). Computer use and journalism teachers: How Oklahoma's secondary journalism teachers use computer for classroom instruction. Oklahoma State University. (Adv.: Stan Ketterer)
- Van Eepoel, V. V. (1971). Journalism certification in Florida: Time for a review. University of Florida. (Adv.: John V. Webb)
- Vernon, E. (2011). Factors influencing occupational commitment among students pursuing careers in journalism. University of Alabama. (Adv.: Wilson Lowrey)
- Visser, A. (1987). Kuhlmeier: Censorship of a high school newspaper. University of Missouri-Columbia.
- Vortreflich, C. R. (1973). Freedom of the press in high school newspapers: Federal court decisions and New York state practices. Teachers College, Columbia University.
- Votaw, L. D. (1922). The high school paper: What it should contain and how it should be managed. (unknown college) (Note: Cited by Redford in Phi Delta Kappan in April 1941 issue).
- Wagstaff Cunningham, A. E. (2012). Beyond the perceptual bias: The third-person effect and censorship behavior in scholastic journalism. Kent State University. (Adv.: Paul Haridakis)
- Wahlert, A. J. (1979). The high school newspaper: Its Role in the Colorado high school. University of Northern Colorado.
- Wahlfeldt, S. N. (2004). H2O, Highlighter handbook of organization (high school newspaper publications handbook: A resource for organizational and journalistic success). University of Nebraska- Lincoln.
- Wall, D. G. (1962). A status study of the yearbook in the public high schools of Pennsylvania. University of Pittsburgh. (Adv.: Vernon C. Lingren)
- Wall, K. M. (1971). An Indiana high school newspaper and its underground newspaper: An attitude study. Indiana University. (Adv.: G. Cleveland Wilhoit)
- Walton, R. D. (1981). A study to determine differences between public schools and new independent schools in Georgia. The University of Mississippi.
- Ward, M. M. (1940). The high school newspapers in city administrative units in North Carolina. University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.
- Waters, R. L. (1976). Independent lesson packets for high school journalism. Ball State

- University. (Adv.: Ruth Iliff)
- Watson, R. L. (1968). Attitudes of selected groups of teachers and principals toward high school journalism. University of Missouri- Columbia. (Adv.: Donald Brenner)
- Weatherholt, K. L. (1983). Qualifications, duties and responsibilities of the secondary journalism educator in West Virginia. West Virginia University. (Adv.: Michael Ryan)
- Webb, E. J. (1986). High school press freedom in Mississippi. University of Mississippi.
- Welch, L. V. (1959). Journalism with a vision: An expanding conception of the journalism course in Southwest high school, Kansas City, Missouri. Teachers College, Columbia University.
- Wellman, R. K. (1972). A study of the influences of the Ball State journalism workshops on students selecting journalism for their occupation or vocation. Ball State University. (Adv.: Louis E. Ingelhart)
- Wendt, K. C. (1952). The high school newspaper as a public relations agent. DePaul University.
- Wesche, L. E. (1961). A study of the practices and procedures used in supervising and producing student newspapers in some high schools of the United States with particular emphasis on the northwest. University of Northern Colorado.
- Weston, M. P. (1998). Is the answer “xtreme”? Can a youth section aimed at teenagers effectively attract people ages 15-18 to a daily newspaper? University of Georgia. (Adv.: Kent Middleton)
- White, N. R. (1969). A study of journalism courses offered for academic credit by Mississippi public high schools. Louisiana State University. (Adv.: A.O. Goldsmith)
- Whiting, J. (2010). Convergence in the classroom: Expanding new media delivery and content in journalism and broadcast courses. Michigan State University.
- Whittle, D. D. (1983). A needs assessment of continuing education in journalism for the secondary teacher/adviser in Iowa. Iowa State University. (Adv.: J.K. Hvistendahl)
- Widmer, L. B. (1983). Censorship of Missouri high school newspapers. Iowa State University. (Adv.: Richard Kielbowicz)
- Williams, E. (2005). Functions and control of student newspapers at public high schools: Perceptions, practices and policies of Wyoming principals and advisers. University of Wyoming. (Adv.: John Bender)
- Wilson, N. R. (1973). A guide to yearbook organization and production for the beginning adviser. University of Kansas. (Adv.: John B. Bremmer)
- Wisn, R. C. (1955). The substitution of journalism in lieu of required English. University of Utah.
- Witter, D. A. (1995). Continuing education, certification and educational technology needs of secondary journalism teachers in Oklahoma public schools. Oklahoma State University. (Adv.: Bruce Petty)
- Woolledge, L. R. (1932). The content of high school handbooks. Northwestern University.
- Worsham, A. G. (2007). Framing political news in the high school classroom: The case of Channel One. The University of Utah. (Adv.: Peregrine Schwartz-Shea)

- Wutka, M. E. (1980). Michigan class A high school newspaper practices and policies. Central Michigan University. (Adv.: Gilbert O. Maienknecht)
- Yagle, P. D. (1975). Journalism teaching-advising courses at West Virginia University and 103 other schools. West Virginia University
- Yaskin, S. (1992). Freedom of expression in high school publications as perceived by student editors. University of Miami. (Adv.: Michael B. Salwer)
- Yocum, L. J. (1999). Eighth-grade writers and meaning-making: A study of computer-mediated conferencing and publishing. Iowa State University. (Adv.: Leslie R. Bloom)
- Yoder, A. M. R. (1978). Content of mass media courses in Iowa public high schools. Iowa State University. (Adv.: J.K. Hvistendahl)
- Young, J. J. (2011). Collaboration in action: The impact of a cooperative learning environment on student engagement in ninth grade English. University of California- San Diego.
- Yunt, R. S. (1977). A comparison of teacher qualifications and certification requirements and their effect on school publication in the greater Louisville area. Ball State University. (Adv.: Ruth Iliff)
- Zimbert, M. A. (2009). A renaissance for newspapers rich and poor. University of Southern California. (Adv.: William Celis)

Updated: Oct. 15, 2013